The Center for Criminology and Public Policy Research

The Center for Criminology and Public Policy Research (Center) is part of the Florida State University (FSU) College of Criminology and Criminal Justice (College). The Center was designated in 2004 as a Type II Research Center by the FSU Office of the Provost and secures and expends both public and private research funds. The Center's primary purpose is to expand the influence of scholarship on public policy and to promote evidence-based criminal justice policymaking and practice at the local, state, and national levels. The Center facilitates and supports data collection and research initiatives that simultaneously advance the academic discipline of criminology and informs juvenile and criminal justice policy and practice.

Specifically, the Center's objectives are to:

- Obtain and maintain external funding that supports policy-relevant research,
- Conduct rigorous empirical research that is policy and practice-relevant,
- Contribute to the discipline of criminology through theoretically relevant and methodologically sound research and peer-reviewed publications,
- Disseminate and promote evidence-based research that informs policy and practice at the national, state, and local levels through coordinated marketing efforts with the College and partnerships with and presentations to practitioners and policymakers,
- Provide opportunities for students to participate in the Center's research and policy and practice-related activities.

To meet these objectives, the Center established Research and Policy Institutes that represent areas of expertise, experience, and interest among the College faculty. The institutes reflect critical areas of juvenile and criminal justice where research can be translated into effective public policy aimed at reducing the pain and suffering of crime.

Research and Policy Institutes

As of June 2022, eleven Research and Policy Institutes had been established within the Center and a twelfth Research and Policy Institute is scheduled to launch in 2023. The Institutes and Directors are listed below.

Table 1: Center Research and Policy Institutes
Institute	Director(s)
Aging Adult Fraud Research & Policy Institute	Julie Brancale Thomas Blomberg
Biosocial Criminology Research & Policy Institute	Kevin Beaver Joseph Schwartz
Corrections Research & Policy Institute	Daniel Mears
Crime Victim Research & Policy Institute	Jillian Turanovic Krista Flannigan
Hate Crime Research & Policy Institute	Brendan Lantz Marin Wenger
International and Comparative Criminology Research & Policy Institute	Sylwia Piatkowska Cecilia Chouhy
Jail Research & Policy Institute	Jennifer Copp Thomas Blomberg
Juvenile & Adult Correctional Education Research & Policy Institute	Thomas Blomberg George Pesta
Juvenile Justice Research & Policy Institute	Carter Hay Sonja Siennick
Life Course Research & Policy Institute*	Megan Augustyn
Policing, Security Technology, & Private Security Research & Policy Institute	Brian Stephens Darrel Stephens
Race and Crime Research & Policy Institute	Patricia Warren Eric Stewart

*The Life Course Criminology Research & Policy Institute is scheduled to launch in 2023 with the arrival of new faculty member Megan Augustyn.

The Institutes are led by members of the College faculty that serve as Directors and Co-Directors. Directors are experts in the substantive area of their institute, manage research projects and grants, and coordinate Institute activities with Center staff, College faculty, research partners, funding sponsors, and undergraduate and graduate students. In addition, Institute Directors actively incorporate their research into their teaching practices, develop specialized courses, and provide students with opportunities for dissertation and theses research, directed individual studies, and research practicums. As the Research and Policy Institutes become more established and develop sustainable sources of funding, the roles and responsibilities of Institute Directors will likely evolve. Given the current context of juvenile and criminal justice reform, Institute Directors will likely be expected to play an even more active role in translating their research into public policy and practice.

In 2021, Darrel and Brian Stephens joined the Center to develop the Policing, Security Technology, and Private Security Research & Policy Institute, which seeks to significantly contribute to evidence-based public and private safety policies and practices. The Institute partners with police, the private sector, and other agencies to conduct research and evaluation that informs policies and practices. Through its research, the Institute aims to inform police and security policy with evidence-based practices that engage the community, increase public safety, and secure government and private assets.

Additionally, in 2021, work began on the Capital Region Real Time Crime Center (RTCC) project. The RTCC is a hub for technology and collaboration between the FSU Police Department, the Leon County Sheriff's Office and the Tallahassee Police Department, as well as the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and the Capitol Police, helping law enforcement agencies in the area capitalize on an expanding range of technologies for efficient and effective policing. In addition, the RTCC has an in-house learning lab that will allow researchers and students from FSU's College of Criminology and Criminal Justice to provide timely analysis of crime trends.

As evidenced by these new additions to the Center, it is anticipated that the number of institutes will continue to grow along with expanded College and Center faculty expertise and juvenile and criminal justice policy and practice needs.

The remainder of this annual report presents descriptive statistics and summary information relating to each of the goals set forth in the Center's strategic plan, namely, sustainability and the development of partnerships, pursuing funded research, conducting research, impacting criminal justice policy and practice, and establishing a unique learning environment. This report includes information gathered from July 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022.

Goal 1 – Sustainability and Development of Partnerships

Establish base or reoccurring funding to support the overall sustainability and general budget needs of the Center. Establish and maintain collaborative partnerships with government agencies, professional organizations, and private industry.

Of critical importance to the future direction and growth of the Center are the establishment of institutionalized partnerships. Several new partnership agreements were executed or developed from 2021 through 2022. First, the Center’s partnership with the Walton County Sheriff’s Office to provide advising and evaluation services for jail and reentry programming began. Second, the Center will continue its partnership with the Palm Beach County Criminal Justice Commission (PBCJC) and the MacArthur Foundation’s Safety and Justice Challenge, evaluating pretrial release practices in Palm Beach County, including an analysis of the effectiveness of existing release mechanisms and a comparison of regular and duty judges. Additionally, the Center has been in discussion with PBCJC to conduct policing evaluation and research in various jurisdictions within the county.

Center partnerships continue to include state and local agencies across Florida such as the Florida Departments of Juvenile Justice and Corrections, the PBCJC, Miami-Dade County, and local Sheriffs’ offices including Walton and Leon. The Center has also partnered with several organizations outside of Florida, including Bowling Green State University, the University of California Irvine, NORC at the University of Chicago, Arnold Ventures, and the MacArthur Foundation.

The Center continues to pursue funding to bolster its capacity for conducting juvenile and criminal justice policy and research. Among the Center’s strategic priorities are obtaining endowments that would support specific research and policy institutes and long-term reoccurring contracts with public and private organizations. Proposals and contracts pursued from 2021 through 2022 were among the most diverse in the Center’s history and included proposals to a variety of local and state organizations, federal government organizations, and private organizations. Namely, local and state proposals were pursued with the Palm Beach County Criminal Justice Commission, Walton County Sheriff’s Office, Leon County Sheriff’s Office, and the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice; proposals for federal organizations included the National Institute of Justice, National Institute of Health, the National Science Foundation, and the Institute of Education Sciences; and proposals with private organizations included the Spencer Foundation, Russell Sage, and the MacArthur Foundation.

Goal 2 – Pursuing Funded Research

Pursue project-specific funding that encourages faculty participation and fulfills the purpose of the Center to conduct policy relevant research and the mission of the College to “Bring Research to Life.”

Table 2 provides information on research proposals submitted and contracts pursued from July 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022. As shown in Table 2, 30 proposals, letters of interest, and negotiated contracts totaling $9,327,569 were submitted for funding consideration. Twelve proposals were submitted through collaborative partnerships (i.e., partnerships between counties or universities and federal agencies). In addition, ten proposals were submitted directly to federal agencies, one to state agencies, two to county agencies, three to private organizations, and two to internal funding agencies.

Goal 3 – Conducting Research

Conduct research that is germane to the interests of the College and Center faculty and fulfills the purpose of the Center to conduct policy relevant research and mission of the College to “Bring Research to Life.”

Twenty-three academic publications and presentations at nine academic conferences originated from Center projects in 2021 and are listed below.¹ The publications included contributions by 11 faculty members, 7 graduate students, and 11 project partners (i.e., professors at other universities and criminal justice agency staff).

¹ Academic publications and presentations are based on calendar year, from January 1, 2021, through December 30, 2021.

Goal 5 – Creating a Unique Learning Environment

Provide unique learning opportunities for post-graduate, graduate, and undergraduate students.

The Center is committed to providing the College’s graduate and undergraduate students with opportunities to have transformative and empowering educational experiences in which they not only acquire knowledge through traditional classroom learning but learn to create and apply knowledge through hands-on research and policy experiences. Beyond providing funding for graduate students, which includes the opportunity to collaborate with faculty on research projects, the Center also provides these experiential learning opportunities through directed individual study (DIS) courses, dissertations, theses, and area papers. The number of DIS and supervised research activities during FY 2021 – 2022 are listed below.

- Thirteen graduate research assistants were funded for a total of 22 semesters to work on various Center research projects.
- Fifteen DIS courses using data from a Center project were offered to graduate students.
- Two undergraduates were employed to work on various Center related research projects.
- Eleven DIS courses using data from a Center project were offered to undergraduate students.
- Four students were supervised on Center related research projects through the Undergraduate Research Opportunity Program (UROP).
- One graduate student, Vivian Hughes, completed her dissertation with project-related data in the Spring 2022 semester — Aranda-Hughes, V. (2022). Paying the price of punitiveness: Examining the effects of extended restrictive housing work on prison personnel.

Summary and Future Directions

The Center continues to seek external funding to conduct juvenile and criminal justice policy and practice research. The funding and its related research projects help to support faculty research initiatives and provide students with opportunities for research experience, professional presentations, publications, and funding.

The Center has continued to build upon its established trajectory of excellence. During 2021 and 2022, the Center pursued and achieved several strategic initiatives including the establishment of additional Research and Policy Institutes, the strengthening of existing and additional new partnerships, and the awarding of new funded research projects. The Center applied to and/or received research funding from 26 different public and private organizations. This resulted in applications for $9,327,569 and management of $4,279,147 in new and ongoing research funding. Involvement in the Center included 21 faculty who submitted research proposals and 14 faculty who were funded on active projects, 13 graduate students, and 6 undergraduate students.

FY 2022 – 2023 Initiatives

FY 2022 – 2023 initiatives include enhancing the College’s curriculum through a new Translational class and the convening of a Curriculum Review Committee, developing new Memorandum’s of Understanding (MOU) with potential partners, focusing on philanthropic opportunities for research funding and endowments, and expanding Center staff and resources.

The College’s initiative to successfully “Bring Research to Life” will be supported through a new graduate-level course on Translational Criminology & Politics. Led by Dean Tom Blomberg and former President John Thrasher, the purpose of the course is to: (1) trace the development of the discipline of criminology and criminal justice culminating in the current translational criminology movement, and (2) assess the necessary and combined role of Researcher Policymaker/ Practitioner Partnerships and “Champions” to effectively navigate the political barriers routinely encountered in translating research into evidence-based criminal justice policies and practices. A primary theme of the course includes the problem of merely focusing upon causality versus the best available research evidence debate over criminology’s research and policy role. The course will provide several examples of crime policies in which the use of best available research evidence can (1) provide direct intervention and (2) result in the effective amelioration of some alterable conditions known to be associated with crime and/or the criminal justice system. Importantly, the class will be structured around the work of the Center's various Research & Policy Institutes, inviting Institute Directors to provide a lecture about their Institute, the research that is being conducted, and their translational considerations or plans for policymakers and practitioners.

In addition, the Dean has convened a Curriculum Review Committee, composed of College faculty, to review the College's curriculum and institutionalize a translational curriculum with the goal of teaching students to acquire knowledge, create new knowledge, and apply that knowledge to policies and practices that reduce the pain and suffering associated with crime. Center Institutes will facilitate the translational curriculum through invited lectures with Institute Directors and courses focused on the translational work of the Institutes, such as the Translational Criminology & Politics course.

The Institute on Aging Adult Fraud Research and Policy is working to develop partnerships with the Florida Attorney General's Office and AARP. In addition, the Institute is planning to develop and administer a national survey of older adults to assess the prevalence, causes, and consequences of financial exploitation of older adults. Collaborative discussions are also occurring with Professors from the FSU College of Business, the North American Securities Administrators Association, as well as the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta.

The Center has entered into a researcher-practitioner/policymaker MOU with the Leon County Sheriff's Office (LCSO) to gain a deeper understanding of the underlying causes and circumstances contributing to violence in Leon County and identify evidence-based strategies that can be applied to reduce or prevent the violence. Specifically, Leon County's Committee on the Status of Men and Boys (CSMB) will combine and coordinate Leon County and Tallahassee's multi-agency efforts and establish a comprehensive plan for implementing evidence-based violent crime and homicide reduction initiatives. The Center will serve as the evaluator of the multi-agency programs and initiatives that are developed through the LCSO's CSMB, describing and explaining the effectiveness of the multi-agency initiatives in reducing violent crime and homicides in Leon County.

The College is developing an MOU with the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ). The MOU proposes a partnership with DJJ to provide state-of-the-art research that is designed to inform juvenile justice policy as well as a pathway for student internship and employment opportunities within the juvenile justice field. The objectives of the partnership are to strengthen collaborative research opportunities between the Center and DJJ and provide unique learning experiences for the College's students by integrating on-campus studies with real-life work experiences in juvenile justice.

The College has developed a research, policy, and education partnership with the Seminole Tribe of Florida. As part of the partnership, the Seminole Tribe has provided a gift to the College to establish the Tom Bowers Memorial Seminole Law Enforcement Fund to provide financial support to students who participate in internships with the Seminole Police Department. In recognition of the partnership and to honor the memory of Tom Bowers, the College plans to incorporate a Seminole Tribe Law Enforcement Exhibit as part of the Kellogg renovation. This exhibit will highlight and preserve the history of Seminole law enforcement and share their experiences of service and sacrifice for generations to come. The College will work collaboratively with the Seminole Tribe to design, display, and exhibit artifacts of historical and cultural significance to the men and women of law enforcement and the Seminole Tribe.

Further, the College's Development Office is working with alumni and donors on gift donations to support the Center's Research and Policy Institutes. These gifts go to the Institute of the donor's choosing. Donations have been committed to the Aging Adult Fraud Research & Policy Institute and the Policing, Security Technology, & Private Security Research & Policy Institute.

Finally, the Center is expanding its staffing and resource capacity. The Center recently hired Brian Merck as a Grants Compliance Analyst. This position is responsible for the administration and management of multiple externally funded research projects and the day-to-day operations in the Center. These operations include identifying sources of potential funding, developing budgets for research project proposals, project monitoring and reporting, and translational research collaboration with College staff on Center-marketing related activities.
